Arms.—Ar. a fess gu. between three popinjays vert. collared, beaked and membered of the second.

Crest.—A Pelican* in her nest feeding her young ppr.

EXPLANATION.

The fess gules was used by a member of the family who the author supposed was our ancestor, and this coat of arms his, but subsequent researches have proved that a chevron gules was used by his ancestors, and the correction may be made as soon as the connecting link between the English and American families is substantiated.

Another line of the family, before A.D. 1600, placed 3 escallops ar. on the fess.

In 1584, a chevron was used in place of the fess by the Thweng families of Upper Helmsley and Heworth; at present these families (according to Burke) bear on a red shield 9 gold popinjays.

INTRODUCTION.

OF those who have never undertaken a work like this, few can realize what a vast amount of research and patient labor is required properly to trace out a Family Tree or Genealogy. It is not the work of a few months only, but often occupies several years. It is only within a few years that public records of births, marriages and deaths have been properly kept, even in New England, and still in many parts of this country the keeping of such records is very imperfect, especially in the South and West. It is a matter of regret that this important branch of history has been so much neglected, as a great deal of valuable material is thereby forever lost. Those of our family who live in the South will understand this to be the reason why their records are so meagre, for I have availed myself of every opportunity at my command to obtain all the information possible, and the result is contained in the following pages.

A village bearing the name of Thwing lies forty miles east of the city of York, about which Rev. Edward Payson Thwing, in his "Out-door Life in Europe," writes as follows: "One little hamlet, ten miles distant, was my Mecca this time, the town of Thwing. It was sought with the zeal of an antiquary simply, inasmuch as a volume bearing this humble monosyllable is in preparation by a kinsman. Stopping at the rectory, my horse and driver were housed, for it was raining hard, and I strolled out for a walk to the venerable church and graveyard. At the College of Arms I had learned about Sir Robert de Thwing, knight, Lord of Kilton Castle, 1237, and his descendants who were engaged with Edward I. in the wars with Scotland. Here over the altar is a memorial window bearing the names of Archbishop Lamplough and Baron de Thwing. Mural tablets record other names. The stone figure of a priest holding a sacramental cup lies in the chancel, and there is a large baptismal font which is supposed to be seven hundred years old. The carvings of the stone porch are very elaborate, and heraldic insignia embellish the walls. The living is 900 pounds a year. The population of Thwing is but 365, and no resident has been known for years bearing this family name. The wolds, high open tracts, surround the village, and the fields show evidence of high cultivation. The cottages of the farm laborers are one story, stone, thatched or covered with earthen tiles."

The name is derived from the Danish Twinge, to force, master, subdue; or a name perhaps given from dexterity in archery. The name has been spelt in many ways, as follows: Twinge, Twenge, Twynge, Thwenge, Thwynge, Thweng, Thwinge, Thwing.

As most of the family continue to keep the spelling as our mutual ancestor Benjamin Thwing, who died about A.D. 1672, wrote his name, I have concluded to adopt that mode of spelling in the genealogy of the American branches of the family, designating where another mode of spelling is used as far as I can. Those who have dropped the "H" in the name are in Springfield, Waltham, and Monterey, Mass.; Barre, Vt.; New York City; Boone, Iowa; Whitewater, Wis.

The Coat of Arms, which I have placed on a previous page, is that of the family in England, of whose history a sketch is given on a subsequent page, but without laying claim to either as belonging to the American branch of the family, because I cannot connect the English family and that of Benjamin Thwing, the first to bear our name in this country, though I have little doubt that he was descended from the same stock. I have long wished to find out his immediate ancestry, but my efforts to establish the connection have been hitherto unsuccessful. I hope that hereafter it may be accomplished by another, if not by myself. I have printed this historical sketch somewhat earlier than I had at first intended, in the hope of awakening an interest in members of the family to become acquainted with the facts I now have, to rectify errors and furnish me with further information on the subject.

It has been thought that a meeting of the different branches of this family would be of interest. Four of the family have already tried to bring about such a reunion, but so far without success. I sincerely hope that the sight of these records will stir the family to accomplish what that effort has failed to do.

No doubt my book will be found incomplete, but I shall esteem it a favor if any omissions or errors are pointed out to me by those who find them.

With regard to the matter of arranging the order and descent of generations and families, the plan adopted in this work comprises a full list of the children of each head of a family directly under his or her name. Where the information concerning these children is small and their posterity not numerous, the whole record is generally given at once; when otherwise, the name is designated by a number, and, carried forward and placed on a future page in brackets, it makes the starting point of a new family. The Italic names enclosed in parentheses at the beginning of each new family carry the line back to the original ancestor, in genealogical order, as designated by the figures at the right of each name and above the line. These small figures at the right of family names should be carefully noted in tracing out each record.

I now take occasion to thank all who have assisted me in this work, and hope to continue to hear from them as often as they have anything to communicate. I shall always continue my interest in this genealogy, and shall add to it any facts I may receive, to appear in a future edition, or to assist the future compiler of a similar work.

THE THWING FAMILY.

THE TWENGE FAMILY IN ENGLAND.

THE first of the name mentioned in history is Sir ROBERT DE TWENGE, a knight, and Lord of Kilton Castle, Cumberland County, England, about the year 1231. He is called a bold Yorkshire knight, and put himself at the head of a secret association formed to resist the intrusion of Italian ecclesiastics into English benefices under the authority of Papal "Provisions." He had been deprived of his right of nomination to the one living or benefice he possessed, that of Luton, by a "Provision," and the movement which he led was secretly encouraged by the Barons and the Clergy. Threatening letters were addressed to the foreign priests; the nuncios and other officers of the Pope were seized and one was killed; the Pope's bulls were trampled under foot. The Pope Gregory IX. issued an angry bull (A.D. 1232) in reference to these excesses which continued for some months, and Henry III. was alarmed. Twenge went to Rome, not as a penitent, but to plead manfully the cause he had taken in hand. He was the bearer of a remonstrance from the Earls of Chester, Winchester and other nobles. The Pope listened to the reasonable plea, and Twenge obtained the acknowledgment of his right to nominate to his family living, and a declaration that the Pope would not again usurp the rights of the lay patrons. He was sent by Richard, Earl of Cornwall, to Emperor Frederick,

II. (1240), and with Earl Richard arrived in Palestine, October, 1240. He was succeeded by his son MARMADUKE, who espoused Emma, sister and heiress of Duncan Darrell, and was succeeded by his son

ROBERT, Lord of Kilton Castle, who married Maud, the widow of Sir John de Oketon. Children:

1. i. MARMADUKE (Sir), his successor.
- ii. RICHARD (Sir), Lord of Boyville, who m. Juliana, relict of Sir Walter d'Awdre, knt.
- iii. YVAN, who had a son John.
- iv. A daughter, who m. William Constable, ancestor to the Constables of Flamborough.
- v. ALICE, m. John Oketon.

(1) MARMADUKE⁴ (Robert,³ Marmaduke,² Robert), succeeded his father as Lord of Kilton Castle. He married Lucia de Brus, sister of Peter de Brus of Skelton, and acquired by his marriage considerable estates in the county of York. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Lewes, and paid 700 marks for his liberty. In 1294 he had summons amongst the other great men of that time to repair with all speed to the king, and to afford him his advice touching the most important affairs of the realm. He had subsequently a military summons to march against the French. Children:

2. ROBERT (Sir), his successor.
3. MARMADUKE (Sir).
4. EDWARD.

(2) ROBERT⁵ (Marmaduke,⁴ Robert,³ Marmaduke,² Robert). He was Lord of Danby, as well as Lord of Kilton Castle. He married, first, Margaret Brus, by whom he had no issue; second, Lucia ———, by whom he had LUCIA, who m. first, William de Latimer of Corby, who d. in 1326; second, Bartholomew de Farnacourt; third, Robert Everingham of Laxton.

- (3) MARMADUKE⁵ (Marmaduke,⁴ Robert,³ Marmaduke,² Robert). He succeeded his brother to the title. He took a very active part in the wars with the Scots. In the battle of Sterling, Sept. 10, 1297, the English forces were commanded by the earl of Surrey, and Cressingham the English Treasurer. In the account of the battle the historian says that Surrey still hesitated to cross the stream which separated the two armies, but Cressingham the Treasurer passionately exclaimed: "Why do we thus protract the war, and waste the king's treasures? Let us fight as is our bounden duty." Surrey, contrary to his own better judgment, yielded, and gave orders for an immediate attack. Cressingham, along with Sir Marmaduke Twenge, a valiant and experienced soldier, led the van. When about one-half of the English forces had passed the bridge without opposition, Sir Marmaduke impetuously charged up hill with a body of heavy-armed cavalry, for the purpose of dislodging the Scots from their strong position. The consequence of this rash attack was fatal to the assailants, as the Scots, from their vantage ground, drove them headlong before them with their long spears. Sir William Wallace, who commanded the Scots, defeated and totally routed the English after a hard contest. Twenty thousand men are believed to have fallen in the battle and in the flight. The completeness of the ruin of the English army is attested by one of its knights having gained immortality by effecting a retreat for himself and some others. This was Sir Marmaduke de Twenge, who, when others spoke of throwing themselves into the river, with a small following cut his way to the bridge and recrossed it. But the recovery was of little avail to the rest of the army. The loss of the Scots was trifling. Sir Marmaduke de Twenge was left in command of Stirling Castle after this battle. In 1298 the castle was taken by Sir William Wallace, and he seized Sir Marmaduke de Twenge at a conference. In the battle of Bannockburn, June 24, 1314, the English had been totally defeated. Sir Marmaduke de Twenge contrived to conceal himself during the fury of the pursuit, and early next morning, when the king (Robert Bruce) was surveying the field of battle, he came forth from his hiding place, and approaching the king, knelt down before him. "Welcome, Sir Marmaduke," said Bruce, to whom he was personally known, "whose prisoner are you?" "Yours, sir," answered the knight. "I receive you," replied the king, and retained him in his company for a considerable time, treating him with the utmost courtesy and ultimately dismissing him, not only without ransom but loaded with gifts. He was summoned to Parliament as a Baron, from Feb. 22, 1307, to Sept. 18, 1322. He married Isabel de Ross of Igmanthorpe, in the county of York. He died in 1323. Children:

- i. WILLIAM, his father's successor to the title as second Baron of the name, was summoned to Parliament Dec. 30, 1324, but never afterwards. He m. Katherine Furnival, of Hallamshire. No children. He d. in 1341.
- ii. ROBERT succeeded his brother to the title. He was a Catholic priest, and died in 1344.
- iii. THOMAS, also a clergyman. This baron being rector of the church of Lythun, founded a chantry of 12 priests and 4 clerks in the parochial church there, to pray for the good estate of himself, Henry Lord Perci and for the souls of his ancestors; likewise for the souls of Robert de Thweng and Maud his wife, Marmaduke de Thweng and Lucy his wife, etc. He died in 1374, when his estates devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs, and the Barony of Thweng fell into abeyance.

THE THWING FAMILY IN AMERICA.

BENJAMIN THWING,

FROM whom all who bear the name in America are descended, was born in England, about 1619. He emigrated from London to America in April, 1635, in the ship or vessel called "Susan & Ellen," Edward

Benjamin Thwing

Payne, master, as one of the servants or apprentices of Ralph Hudson. His wife Deborah is reported to have come with him, although there is no mention of her name among the list of passengers. Perhaps she came in another vessel about that time. Her full name is at present unknown. The following is a list of the passengers:—

Ralph Hudson, by will dated Sept. 24, 1638, left him ten pounds when his time should be out, and calls him "my man" in it; and Mary Hudson, wife of Ralph, by will left him six pounds in 1651. About the time he became of age he married and made a home for himself, as in the Book of Possessions we read that "The possessions of Benjamin Thwing in Boston" were "One house and garden bounded with Sudbury streete southwest; William Wilson northwest and northeast; Joshua Scotto southeast." That part of Sudbury Street was afterwards included in Queen Street, now Court Street; the house standing, as nearly as can be ascertained, where the Crawford House is.

He was admitted to be townsman, along with others, at the town meeting held March 28, 1642. He was a joiner by trade, and a Proprietor both in Watertown and Concord, Mass. His wife Deborah was admitted to be a member of the First Church in Boston, Aug. 9, 1642, and he was admitted to the same church, Dec. 17, 1643; and their good example has been followed by a majority of their descendants. He died about 1672, and his estate was administered upon by his wife and eldest son, Jan. 8, 1673. An inventory of his estate is as follows:

He went to the part of Mendon, now Milford, and set up his trade at first in the centre, near the junction of West and Congress streets, between 1716 and 1718. His homestead must have been small, consisting perhaps of five or six acres; and that he sold out about 1730, moving over to the dale near his father-in-law, and settling on the estate which he bought of Elder Nathaniel Nelson, where he spent most of his active life. This was bounded north on Elder Jones, east by Mill River, south by old Sherborn road, known in that part as Post Lane, and west by land of one Bridges. It included the present cemetery. It was not a large homestead, and lay partly on both sides of the old drift-way from Post Lane to Elder Jones. There he had his dwelling-house and tannery until 1769, when he finally sold out. He married Mercy Jones of Mendon, now Milford, in June, 1718. She was born in Hull, Mass., in 1697. She was the third daughter of Elder John Jones and his wife Sarah. The first four of his children were born there before the town was named. He served in the French and Indian wars; and the only adventure now remembered by one of his family is this: When on his way to the war he stopped to get a drink of water by the roadside. While drinking, an Indian came up to him and asked him where he was going. He replied that he was going to fight the Indians, whereupon the Indian struck him with a cane, upon which he dropped his knapsack and knocked the Indian down, and sprang upon him and pounded him until he nearly killed him. After they were separated he told the bystanders that if they did not want him to kill the Indian to keep him out of his sight. He was an early member of the First Congregational Church of Uxbridge, and remained so through his life. He was a good neighbor, of genial disposition, and an upright honest man, a firm patriot, as is attested by his sending his son Nathaniel to the war at the age of sixteen, and was desirous to go himself but his family persuaded him to stay at home. He accumulated considerable property, but the depreciation of the old Continental money made sad inroads upon it, but nevertheless he had a competency for life, and a farm of one hundred acres for his children. A view of his homestead, built about 1776, in Uxbridge, is on the opposite page. Mrs. Uranah Thwing, the occupant in 1883, is seated on the left; next, Hattie U. He removed from Boston to the banks of the Kennebec sometime during the year 1757, and passed the following winter there. As he lived all alone, one of his neighbors, a Mrs. Reed, gave him a goose to eat for his Thanksgiving dinner, and while he was eating it he opened the south window and saw a bank of clouds rising, and that night it began to snow and snowed all night. The river became frozen, and at different times the next day two men called to see him on snow shoes, who were the last human beings he saw that winter. The following year he purchased two tracts of land in the county of York, where he had passed the previous winter. The deed was dated Feb. 21, 1758. He went to the West Indies as a supercargo shortly after the purchase of the land, and returned to that part of York County now the Town of Woolwich about 1763, bringing his family with him. Was chosen a representative to General Court in 1782. Was county treasurer in 1792, and "his removal as treasurer was heard with sorrow, and regret accompanied the tale from almost every person. He retired from office with the plaudits of every honest man, with the esteem of every virtuous one, with respect from all who value virtue, who can appreciate worth and regard religion." At the election, N. Thwing had 1508 votes and I. Farley 1561. Was appointed one of the justices of the peace of Lincoln county by Gov. Caleb Strong, Feb. 10, 1803, also justice of the peace and quorum Aug. 22, 1809. Also to the same office by Gov. John Brooks for seven years from July 3, 1816, for Lincoln county. Judge Thwing wore a ring whose stone was in the shape of a coffin, in memory of a lady to whom he was engaged in Boston, but who died before they could be married. He was an Arminian in belief, although some say that he was a Congregationalist. He was very austere in some respects, one of which was he would not allow any work or play to be done on Sundays. After dinner on Thanksgiving day he never took tea or coffee, but Malaga wine, and this was the only occasion when he indulged in wine. He used to be three days and three nights going to Boston in his old chaise for provisions, such as groceries and winter stores. Once while he was returning from church, and while passing through some woods, he saw a bear sitting on his haunches in the middle of the road. Being a man of considerable courage he simply spoke to the bear in a commanding voice and said "Soho, sir," whereupon the bear immediately got up and walked off into the woods. A short distance further on he saw another, which he put to flight in the same manner. He was an epicure, and always had the best that could be obtained. He left a will as follows:

In the Name Of God Amen.

I Nathaniel Thwing of Woolwich in the county of Lincoln, Esq. being in health of body & of a sound and disposing mind and memory, for which I desire to bless God, as the Author & giver of every mercy, and considering the shortness and uncertainty of life, do make and publish this my last will & testament in manner following viz.

Lastly, I hereby nominate and appoint my two sons Nath'l Thwing and John G. Thwing, Executors of this my last will and testament.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this tenth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twelve.

(John,⁶ Nathaniel,⁵ Nathaniel,⁴ John,³ John,² Benjamin) inherited strong traits of character, and a good share of common sense. He was a man of thought; and, while forging the iron and shaping the steel, formed a large individuality which made him a worthy and useful citizen. His attachments were strong for his home and native town where he always resided. He was patriotic, never neglecting to use his influence for the cause of right at the ballot, and was one of the noble few who came out in defence of the oppressed, when the cause was an unpopular one. He joined the freesoil party at its formation, and rejoiced in its grand results. He served his townsmen as chairman of the board of selectmen sixteen years. Those who knew him best attest the fact that he sought faithfully to discharge the duties of the office, which were often, during the late civil war, laborious and difficult. He was for nearly half a century identified with and deeply interested in the Congregationalist church, the oldest in town, and in which his ancestors were members from its formation. He married, first, Sarah White, May 11, 1828, in Woolwich, Me. She was born there March 8, 1802, and died there Oct. 16, 1839. He married, second, Eliza Jane Trott, June 8, 1841, in Woolwich. Jonathan Adams of Woolwich, where he remained but a short time owing to his feeble health. He entered the store of Mr. William Jenkins as clerk soon after (studying with him evenings until he acquired a good business education), in which capacity he remained until his employer's death, when he took full charge of the business, and in a little more than two years afterwards married the widow. He belonged to the whig party, and his attachment was strong to his native place and to the church of his parents. He became a member of the Congregational church in Woolwich, in 1840. (134) SUPPLY CLAP THWING ⁷

(Samuel,⁶ James,⁵ Nathaniel,⁴ John,³ John,² Benjamin) was born at the corner of Horn Lane (formerly called Tanner's Lane, and more recently Bath Street) and Milk Street, in Boston, Mass. The spot is now included in what is known as Post Office Square. After the death of his father the family moved to High Street, near Summer Street, then to Columbia Street, then to Common Street, and then to Carver Street. He went to school for a short time on West Street, and in 1816 was a pupil in the Academy at Exeter, N. H. When he was about twenty years old he sailed in a vessel for Hayti, with the intention of seeking employment there, but not liking the prospects he returned, after passing a few months among the islands. He learned to speak French there with the help of the ladies, amongst whom he was always a favorite. He then went to learn the book-binders' trade with Mr. Kidder, whose shop was in Devonshire Street, in the rear of the Old Exchange Coffee House, and staid there so short a time that he only learnt how to tie up bundles. He then entered the counting room of Messrs. S. Cabot & J. & T. H. Perkins, Jrs., on India Wharf. He was afterwards in the counting room of J. & T. H. Perkins & Sons, on Central Wharf. He entered the office of R. D. Shepherd, Esq., in Pearl Street, Feb. 7, 1821. He was married to Elsey Fellowes Davis, May 18, 1824, in the house of David Dudley, Esq., in Roxbury, Mass., by Rev. Dr. Porter. She was a daughter of Joseph and Elsey Dudley Davis, and was born in Roxbury, Nov. 11, 1804. She died in Roxbury, Sept. 5, 1844, leaving no children. He began business on his own account about 1826, and for fifty years was actively engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was a director of the Manufacturers' Insurance Company, about 1828. In 1831 he formed a copartnership with Stephen H. Perkins, under the firm name of Thwing & Perkins, on India Wharf, and did an extensive business with New Orleans and the East Indies. He was the agent in Boston of R. D. Shepherd, Judah Touro and Peter Marcy, three well-known merchants of New Orleans. He visited New Orleans with his wife in 1835 and 1837, going there by sea and returning by the Mississippi River and Ohio River. He visited Chicago in 1839. About 1844 he became the agent of Charles A. Heckscher, manager of the Forest Improvement Coal Company in Pennsylvania, for the sale of that company's coal in New England. Mr. Perkins retiring from the firm in the spring of 1845, he shortly after formed a copartnership with Richard Sullivan under the firm name of S. C. Thwing & Co. He was interested in the ownership of vessels, and was highly respected for his probity and honor in all matters pertaining to the management of his affairs. He was married to Anne Shapley Haven, June 30, 1847, in Philadelphia, Penn., by Rev. William Henry Furness (see No. 137). She was a daughter of Thomas and Mehitable Jane (Livermore) Haven, and was born in Portsmouth, N. H., May 4, 1819. She was drowned in Lake George by the burning of the steamer "John Jay," July 29, 1856. He was one of the executive committee of the Roxbury Charitable Society in 1851-2. In January, 1857, he sailed for Europe, and passed six months in travel in England, France and Italy. He was married to Anna Haven, cousin to his second wife, Sept. 16, 1857, in Raynham, Mass. She was a daughter of Joshua and Mary (Cunningham) Haven, and was born Sept. 11, 1828, in Philadelphia, Pa. He was, for many years, an active director of the "Institution for Savings in Roxbury and its Vicinity," in the affairs of which he took great interest; and also a deacon of the First Religious Society in Eliot Square, Roxbury, and a trustee and treasurer of "The Grammar School in the Easterly Part of the Town of Roxbury," now known as the Roxbury Latin School. John Thomas was admitted to the firm in 1865. Mr. Sullivan retired in 1873, and Edward B. Townsend was admitted. The style of the firm remained the same until his death. He was an old resident of Roxbury, and it was among his neighbors and fellow-citizens that his truly honorable character was seen to the best advantage. By them he was universally esteemed for his unselfish devotion and loving kindness towards all classes and conditions of men. He was a gentleman of cordial and agreeable manners, of elegant tastes and culture, of warm and constant friendships, and in his intercourse with the world was always guided by a high sense of honor and integrity and purity. He will be remembered with affectionate regard by all who enjoyed his acquaintance. His entire life was marked by usefulness and activity. His commendable action in connection with the founding of the Fellowes Athenæum, is well told in the following extract from the address of Mr. William C. Collar, at the dedication of the building, July 9, 1873:—

"Mr. Fellowes not unnaturally thought of the city where he had found a happy home for almost twenty years; and, being in his later life a great reader, he designed to found there an institution which should be to many the means of that enjoyment and culture which he had himself derived from the best literature. But fortunately, before he was fully resolved, he asked the advice of a friend with whom he had lived in Roxbury, in the most intimate relations. That friend survives him in a vigorous old age, and he is present with us to-day. You all know him well,—the faithful steward of his friend's legacy to you, your friend and neighbor, and mine, the friend of everybody,—Supply Clap Thwing. He said to Mr. Fellowes,—I give his own words,—'My friend, your mother was born in Roxbury, and there, you say yourself, you passed some of the happiest years of your life. We want an Athenæum, and you could not leave your property, outside of your family, to a better object.' Few words, but fit and effective. For the following year, on reading the will of his friend, Mr. Thwing had the satisfaction of finding that his appeal was successful. But I have omitted one circumstance, without which my account would be incomplete; and yet I know not if I have a right to disclose what was told me, perhaps in confidence, months ago, and what I dared not ask permission to make known, when I saw that the public interests demanded that the whole truth should be told. I say the 'public interest,' for it does concern the public to know of every noble and unselfish act which makes nobleness and unselfishness easier for all. And it is due to Mr. Thwing, though I may offend him by this disclosure, that you should know that the planting of this institution among you is due not less to his disinterestedness, than to his timely and prudent counsel. You will already have surmised something of what I had to tell you, namely, that a large part of the sum which, together with the accumulated interest, has been devoted to the establishment of this library, was by Mr. Fellowes's first will bequeathed to Mr. Thwing; and that it was at his urgent request, when this became known to him, that his friend cancelled the legacy, and increased by so much his bequest to you. Thus happily what the splendid generosity of the one conceived and begun, the rare unselfishness of the other completed and crowned; and hence, while we shall always hold him in grateful remembrance to whom we owe this noble benefaction, we shall honor in our hearts the not less noble self-sacrifice of him who refused wealth proffered in the name of friendship, that he might bestow enduring riches on us, and on those who shall come after us; or, still better, that he might put it in the power of each and all of us to enrich ourselves."

(140) THOMAS THWING⁷

(Nicholas,⁶ John,⁵ Thomas,⁴ Edward,³ Edward,² Benjamin) was born in Newton, Mass., and the old homestead was still standing in 1868, near the junction of Homer and Chestnut Streets, West Newton, where he spent his early boyhood. With his mother he was rather a favorite, though there were occasional collisions. He attended school but a small part of the year, nor was his school attractive to him even for that brief period, yet there was something about him, even in boyhood, which induced some of his friends to call him "The Little Minister." At the age of nine years he went at their special request to reside with his grandparents. With them he passed six years. When about fifteen years old he went to learn a trade, that of cabinet maker, in Roxbury. In February, 1813, he found employment in Boston. He became a member of the Park Street church choir. In September, 1814, during the war with England, he was called to do military duty one Sabbath on Boston Common. Before night he and his fellow soldiers were taken down the harbor to Fort Warren. A British vessel of war was then in sight below the light house. In January, 1815, he went to reside in what is now called West Brookfield. He became a member of the Congregational church in West Brookfield May 28, 1815. On Tuesday, March 4, 1817, he was married by Rev. Eliakim Phelps, to Grace Welch Barnes, of Brookfield. She was born Sunday, July 12, 1789, in Brookfield. In October, 1819, he offered his services to the American Board to be employed, if thought best, in the work of Foreign Missions. He was accepted in 1820. In April, 1824, he removed to the village of Ware, Mass. In 1837, he removed to Boston, in order to engage in missionary work. He established his home at the North End, that part of the city which was his field of labor for the remainder of his life. At six o'clock, July 23, 1842, he went to Copp's Hill, where, with the help of a spy-glass, he saw the top stone of Bunker Hill Monument raised from the ground, and in less than forty minutes it was fixed in its place, where it will probably remain for ages to come. His wife died Thursday, Aug. 31, 1865, very suddenly, although she had been an invalid for many years. On Thursday, April 25, 1867, he went out for the last time. He took a car to Charlestown Neck, visited an aged sister of Salem church, and walked back to the city, and as he was crossing the bridge towards evening, he was chilled by the raw, cold wind. Faint and weary he reached his residence, and lay down, never to rise again. He died Monday, May 6, 1867, with his children around him. On the following Wednesday funeral services were held, first at the house and then at Salem church, the officers of the church officiating as pall bearers. He is buried in Mount Auburn. Children:

- i. HARRIET NEWELL, b. May 5, 1818, in West Brookfield, Mass.; m. John Adams Plummer, March 2, 1845. She was city missionary in Boston fifteen years, and afterwards matron of the Home for Little Wanderers in Boston. She now lives with her sister in Chelsea, Mass.

(243) HENRY THWING⁸

(David,⁷ James,⁶ John,⁵ John,⁴ John,³ John,² Benjamin) married Mrs. Sophia Geraldine Greene, Nov. 18, 1880, in Chardon, Ohio. She was born July 6, 1837, in Verona, N. Y. Her maiden name was Pratt, and she was twice a widow. They live in Chardon, Ohio. He enlisted April 24, 1861, under the first call for 75,000 men for three months, in Co. F, 19th Reg. O. V. M., Capt. Geo. E. Paine, the regiment commanded by Col. Beaty. He was taken sick and was discharged Aug. 30, 1861, but re-enlisted Aug. 30, 1862, before he had fully regained his health, in Co. F, 7th Reg. O. V. M., and joined his regiment at Harper's Ferry, Va., Sept. 26, 1862. They remained two months in that vicinity drilling, doing guard duty, scouting and doing some skirmishing. On Dec. 10, 1862, they started on the march. They encamped at Dumfries, where they had quite a skirmish. In the following January he was sent to the hospital sick with rheumatism, and recovered in April, 1863. On the 27th of that month they received orders to march with eight days rations. As soon as they were in line they were ordered on the double-quick, and as he was unable to keep up he fell to the rear and followed after, and came up with his company about half an hour after they had gone into camp that night. The next morning he obtained a pass to ride in the ambulance, but as the ambulances were all full he had to go on foot. He marched all day until nine o'clock in the evening, and encamped alone about a mile in the rear of his regiment. As soon as he awoke the next morning he started and reached the regiment just as they started. He obtained a certificate from the surgeon because he could not keep up, and sick and sore he established a hospital of his own and rested until about two o'clock the next day, then feeling a little better and learning that the army had crossed the Rappahannock and removed the pontoon bridge, he retraced his steps down the river towards the place to which they had removed the bridge. He marched seven or eight miles and encamped in a church, and the next morning started on, and just at night came opposite Chancellorsville where he could see the smoke of battle and hear the cannon. The next morning (May 2d) he started for the battlefield, crossed the river about 2 P. M., and met the regimental Hospital Steward in charge of a train of ambulances with wounded, and inquired of him where his regiment lay, but instead of answering him he (the steward) said that it was no place for him, and told him to go back across the river and stay with the wagon train. He started back and crossed the river, and getting tired sat down to rest. He did not like the idea of going back, so when he was rested he again started for the regiment, and about ten o'clock at night had the satisfaction of camping with the company. They had not been resting very long when they were aroused by cannonading which lasted only a short time, and then everything became quiet and they slept until daylight. He soon had his first experience in battle (May 3d) and it raged hot and heavy until 2 P. M., when they received orders to fall back. He was struck on the arm by a very small piece of shell, and soon after had his knapsack torn in pieces by a cannon shot. They then marched back to Acquia, staid there a few days, and then started north through Maryland into Pennsylvania. Owing to poor health he was unable to keep up, but whenever the army stopped he was able to overtake them. July 2d found them near Gettysburg. He was with the ambulance train when the battle began. He helped to take care of the wounded until after noon of the 3d, when he started for the regiment and found them in the breastworks about nine o'clock in the evening, expecting to renew the fight the next morning, but Gen. Lee withdrew in the night, so he did not take part in that battle. Then he marched with the regiment to Harper's Ferry, and then to Rappahannock. On August 24th they were sent to New York harbor, and encamped on Governor's Island a little over a week. Then they were sent back to Virginia, and about the 25th of Sept. their corps (the twelfth) were ordered to Tennessee and were consolidated with the eleventh, and forming the twentieth under Gen. Hooker. They were left along the railroad Southeast of Murfreesborough during the month of October, then went into Wauhatchie Valley, and on Nov. 24th they drove the enemy off of Lookout Mountain. On the 25th they took part in the battle of Mission Ridge. On the 27th they had a very severe fight at Ringold, Ga., losing all their field officers killed, and all but one of the company officers either killed or wounded and a large part of the regiment. He was in the thickest of the fight, but got off without a scratch, although there were but two beside him left of their men for several rods. They encamped there one day and night, and during the second night went back to their winter quarters at Wauhatchie. About the 1st of January they went into camp at Bridgeport, Alabama, where they staid until May 2d, when they left there under Gen. Sherman on his famous march to the sea. His regiment was held in reserve at the battle of Rockyface Ridge on the 7th of May. They took part in the battle of Resarca, Ga., on May 15th and on May 25th. He was on the skirmish line through the day and had a very severe fight, and in the evening was ordered up on a bayonet charge where he was struck by a piece of shell and knocked down. He was carried to the rear to the field hospital, and from there rode twenty-eight miles in an army wagon over a very rough road to Kingston, thence by rail to Chattanooga, and on the 2d of June had his wound dressed for the first time. He staid there during the month of June and was well taken care of. Then he was sent to Nashville, Tenn., where he was kept about eight days and experienced very poor care. He then went to Jeffersonville, Indiana, where he had very indifferent care at first, but after several changes at length came into good hands. After having the gangrene burnt out of his wound he began to improve, but soon after had a very severe attack of his old enemy, rheumatism. His wound was entirely healed in the middle of October. On the 1st of November he was sent into camp at Denison, Ohio, and obtained a furlough home just before the election. On Dec. 19th he was sent to Tripler Hospital near Columbus, Ohio; and in March, 1865, he was sent to Washington to do guard duty until discharged June 28, 1865. He now draws a pension of four dollars per month.

(253) JAMES THWING HALE⁸

(Lovina,⁷ John,⁶ James,⁵ John,⁴ John,³ John,² Benjamin) married Alice Buchner, May 16, 1876. She was born in Canada in 1845. When he was about twenty-three years old, he entered the employ of Chapin & Collins, who had a large saw-mill in Somers, Conn., and, after working there six months, he took entire charge. Chapin sold out, but he remained there until the spring of 1861, when he removed to the state of New York, and worked in various places until the fall of the same year, when he enlisted in what he supposed to be a company of sharpshooters, to be attached to the Eagle Brigade, about to be raised by Gen. G. A. Scroggs. His company was to be raised by Joshua Lee. Neither company, regiment nor brigade were raised, but he and his fellow soldiers were sold to Charles E. Morse, who commanded Company I, 100th Reg. N. Y. Volunteers. They were at Fort Porter, just out of the city of Buffalo, until March 8, 1862, when they left for the seat of war, passing through Albany, New York city and Washington. He was appointed corporal in his company, and remained so until he was discharged, his appointment dating from the day of his enlistment, Aug. 9, 1861. They were attached to the first battalion, First Brigade, under Gen.

Casey. They staid in Washington two or three weeks, and then went to Alexandria and took a steamer for Fortress Monroe, and there joined Gen. McClellan in his Virginia campaign. They were ordered to assist in the siege of Yorktown, Va., and then to take part in the battle of Williamsburg, but reached there just in time to see the enemy leaving town. They took part in the battles of Bottom Bridge, Fair Oaks or Seven Pines, White Oak Swamp, and in almost all the battles and skirmishes which occurred in Virginia, in 1862. When the retreat occurred they went back to Yorktown, and then crossed the river to Gloucester Point, and remained there until the following January, recruiting their thinned ranks. While there they were adopted by the Board of Trade of the city of Buffalo as their own regiment, and the board spent considerable money upon them and sent them a new colonel, because their first one (J. M. Brown) had been killed at Fair Oaks. About the first of January, 1863, they were ordered to North Carolina, to report to Major General Foster, for the purpose of reinforcing him as he was going to attack Charleston, S. C. They went to Morehouse City, N. C., and staid there two or three weeks, and then started for South Carolina, and having a stormy passage, arrived at Hilton Head in two days, and were kept on the transport about three weeks before they were allowed to land on an island opposite Hilton Head, where they remained a month, and receiving new rifles led the advance upon Charleston, and for a week were the only regiment upon Cole's Island. Their regiment took part in all the skirmishes and battles around Charleston until the spring of 1864, when they were ordered north to Fortress Monroe to help Gen. B. F. Butler. They were sent up James River to Bermuda Hundred, where he took part in skirmishes until the sixteenth of May, when during a heavy fog and while upon the skirmish line he was surrounded by the enemy and taken prisoner. He was confined in Libby Prison, Andersonville, Charleston and Florence, S. C., the longest time being in Andersonville. He was a prisoner about nine months, and was paroled about the time Gen. Sherman captured Savannah, being included in an agreement to parole ten thousand sick and wounded. The horrors of Andersonville having been told so often, it is unnecessary to repeat them here, but he fully confirms them from actual experience. After his discharge he went to Little Rock, Arkansas, as a mechanic in the Quartermaster's department, where he remained about ten months, and then went to East Saginaw, Michigan, where he has lived nearly all the time since. He was a carpenter and joiner until July, 1873, when he was appointed mail route agent on the Flint and Pere Marquette Railway from Bay City, Michigan, to Toledo, Ohio. He has also served on the fast mail train, and on the route between Buffalo, N. Y., and Toledo, Ohio. He is now on the route between Bay City and Toledo. He has no children.

(329) WALTER ELIOT THWING⁸

(*Supply,*⁷ *Samuel,*⁶ *James,*⁵ *Nathaniel,*⁴ *John,*³ *John,*² Benjamin) is the author of this Genealogy, and was born in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Atkins in Cedar St., Roxbury, Mass., and for many years she sent him a birthday cake. In 1855 he went to a private school kept by the Misses Watson in St. James St., Roxbury, and in 1857 to one kept by Miss Williams, and afterwards by Miss Lewis. In 1861 he entered the Roxbury Latin School, and was graduated in 1868, when he entered Harvard College, staying only through Freshman year. In August, 1869, he entered the counting-room of his father as clerk. On Dec. 26, 1870, he sailed in the ship "Daniel Marcy," Captain William Ross, Jr., from New York bound for San Francisco. The only lands seen on the voyage were the Island of Ferdinand Noronha, off Brazil, Feb. 11, 1871; Cape St. Diego, at the extremity of Terra del Fuego, March 23, 1871; Cape Horn, a couple of days later, and Cape Reyes, off the coast of California, the day of arrival at San Francisco. About half past seven in the morning of Jan. 31, 1871, all hands were aroused by the dreadful cry of "man overboard," caused by a boy falling overboard from the main chains, and in a very few minutes all were on deck. The Captain threw the wooden gratings on which the man at the wheel stands to the boy, who luckily reached them and held on until rescued. A boat was lowered, and, manned by four men under the charge of the mate, rescued the boy about a mile from the ship. A man had already been stationed in the mizzen rigging to keep the lad in sight. He was nearly drowned and insensible, and was hauled up on deck feet first, in order to let the water which he had swallowed flow out of him. In a couple of days he was all right. Luckily the sea was as smooth as it ever is. One day in a heavy sea one of the sailors harpooned a porpoise, about nine feet long, and after some difficulty several men succeeded in hauling him on deck, and he furnished all hands with fresh meat for several days. The flesh is a little like beef, only coarser, and not so easy to digest. On May 14, 1871, a large shark was caught with a chain hook baited with pork, and all hands hauled him on deck. Just before he reached the rail a loop at the end of a long rope was passed around him under his fin, to serve to hold him in case he broke loose from the hook, and with a portion of the crew manning both ropes he was safely hauled over the rail and upon the main deck, where he lashed his tail for some time, every one keeping at a safe distance, leaving him the sole occupant of the deck, because a blow from his tail might have broken a man's leg. It took a long time to kill him, as he was very tenacious of life and was well cut up before he died. He must have been ten feet long. This was an exciting incident. One night a boat from an English emigrant ship boarded the "Daniel Marcy" for the purpose of ascertaining whether England had been drawn into the war then going on between France and Germany, and on learning to the contrary proceeded on its way. Several times on the voyage a dolphin was caught, which brings to mind that

"—— parting day
Dies, like the Dolphin, whom each pang imbues
With a new color as it gasps away,
The last still loveliest, till—'t is gone—and all is grey."

He arrived in San Francisco after a passage of one hundred and seventy days. He passed three months in California, and visited Los Angeles in the southern part, enjoying the extensive and beautiful orange groves in its suburbs, and the Yo Semite Valley in the central part. The vast extent of the latter can only be appreciated by those who have seen it. When the traveller first reaches the bottom of the valley he does not realize its size, nor does he until he has been there several days. It is so symmetrical that nothing seems out of proportion, and is sublime and wonderful. At the best point of view from above, the sides of the valley are four thousand feet deep, and a man on horseback at the bottom looks no larger than a housefly. The excursions are numerous and varied, and everywhere full of interest. The noise of the falls is heard on all sides, and when the streams are full, as they are in spring, the noise is perfectly deafening. It is the largest and grandest valley in the world. He sailed from San Francisco Sept. 30, 1871, in the steamer "Great Republic," Capt. Cobb, for Japan, where he passed a couple of weeks visiting the ports of Yokohama, Yedo, Kobe and Nagasaki, in which he found many curious customs and sights. Then he visited in turn Shanghai, Hong-Kong and Canton in China; Singapore, where the tropical scenery can be found in all its beauty; Penang, a small island where a great many cocoanut palms are seen, the oil of which being one of the chief exports; Point de Galle, in the island of Ceylon, where all the steamer lines meet to exchange passengers and cargoes, and which is a great deal hotter than Singapore, although several degrees farther from the equator; Bombay, about six miles from which is the island of Elephanta, containing the celebrated caves of that name, the first series of which is reached from the shore by ascending one hundred and fourteen steps, and consists of a large cavern whose roof was formerly supported by thirty pillars, some of them being broken. Opening into this are several caves, in one of which there is a pond of good water. The walls are in places ornamented by figures between twenty and thirty feet in height, which are surrounded by smaller ones, serpents and heads of animals. Each of the other series of caves had a main hall into which smaller ones opened. All about the caves had the appearance of great age. He afterwards crossed the country to Calcutta, where there is a mint, and near which are some botanical gardens in which the largest banyan tree known to be in existence is growing. He next visited Benares, the holy city of India, where the celebrated Monkey Temple is situated, and where also is the residence of a Nabob who keeps some of the largest elephants in the world, and allows strangers to ride on them. He next visited Allahabad, the scene of terrible carnage at the time of the Sepoy rebellion, and containing a fort under which there is a temple; then returned to Bombay, from whence he sailed for Egypt, stopping for a few hours at Aden, celebrated for its tanks, to which water is a stranger, and for its fine roads and multitudes of camels; then to Suez, a miserable looking town, only used as a stopping place for steamers to and from the East. He then went to Cairo and Alexandria in Egypt; Messina in Sicily; through Italy, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium to Paris, and then through England and Scotland home to Boston, having been the youngest man who had ever been round the world alone up to that time. He reached his home Oct. 16, 1872, having been absent nearly two years. In January, 1878, he sailed for Jamaica, where he passed two months. He lived in Highland Street, Roxbury, until 1878, when he moved to Jamaica Plain, Mass., a part of Roxbury before it was annexed to Boston, and back to Roxbury in 1881. He was elected a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and became a life member Jan. 7, 1880. He was elected a member of the Bostonian Society, March 14, 1882. He is unmarried, and is a Unitarian. Address, P. O. Box 3324, or 79 State Street, Boston, Mass.

With many others, he contracted a disease incidental to the tropics, which clung to him to his last hour. After his return home he secured an appointment in the Navy Agency, from his commander, Col. I. H. Wright, and subsequently assumed charge of a newspaper in the then territory of Minnesota. He was a graceful and fluent writer, and, had health permitted him to remain in his western home, he would have attained an enviable popularity. He was social, urbane, and possessed to a great degree those amenities

(Franklin,⁷ John,⁶ John,⁵ Thomas,⁴ Edward,³ Edward,² Benjamin) was educated at the best of schools from the age of seven to eighteen years. The latter part of May, 1861, he left the Michigan State University, Ann Harbor, Michigan, in the midst of his college course, and returned to his home in Crystal Lake, Illinois, with the intention of enlisting in the volunteer service, but was too late to be accepted among the three months men who responded to the President's first call. He finally enlisted in Co. A, 36th Illinois Infantry Volunteers. About Sept. 1, 1861, he was appointed second sergeant of the company. They were in Gen. Sigel's Division of Gen. S. Curtis's army operating in Missouri, and took part in the battle of Pea Ridge. His regiment took part in the siege of Corinth, Miss., as a part of Gen. Asboth's Division of Gen. Pope's Corps, and shortly after this were placed under Gen. P. H. Sheridan's command, who had just been commissioned a Brig. General and given a Division. His Division was ordered to Cincinnati, and from there to Louisville, Ky., to aid in repelling Gen. Bragg's advance northward. His regiment took part in the battle of Parryville, Ky., and met with heavy loss. The regiment was stationed at Nashville, Tenn., where he was appointed first sergeant, and about two months after, his next battle was at Murfreesboro', Tenn., the battle of Stone River, in which the Division took a very prominent part and met with severe loss. His regiment lost nearly one-half its fighting force. Shortly after the battle of Stone River he received commissions of second and first lieutenants of his Company (about March, 1863). His Division was with the army in the advance on Tallahoma and Chattanooga, Tenn.; and in September, 1863, he was appointed to the command of a provost guard at Gen. A. M. McCook's headquarters, the commander of his army corps. About Aug. 1, 1863, owing to his mother's urgent solicitations, supplemented with letters from other relatives, he was induced to tender his resignation as first lieutenant; but September arriving, and nothing being heard from the resignation, he concluded to remain in the service, and accordingly obtained leave to visit Winchester, Tenn., and lay in a new supply of clothing. On Sept. 23, he received his resignation papers endorsed accepted. They had been laid aside and not received until six weeks after they should have been. After his return home he began to study medicine, but gave it up owing to ill health. About September, 1867, he became engaged in merchandizing, but soon sold out fearing a loss. In January, 1875, he became connected with a general advertising firm in Chicago, but ill health compelled him to seek out-door employment, and he concluded to undertake sheep raising, living in Bunker Hill, Kansas, and has been so far very successful in raising sheep.
